WORK OF HOUSE COMMITTEES.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—The distillers are very much opposed to the proposed change in the Revenue law. They had an argument before the Ways and Means Committee this morning, urging that the law discriminated in favor of the bourbon distillers as against the high wine distillers.

The House Judiciary Committee in the investigation of the Acklen case is said to have taken a great deal of evidence that was not before the Committee on Foreign Affairs and that it appears that detectives have played a part in this curious business.

THE WASHBURN-DONNELLY CASE.

Mr. Manning of the Election Committee is said to express the opinion that what is now the minority report in the Washburn-Donnelly case, which favors the seating of Donnelly, will be adopted by the House.

PACIFIC RAILROAD CONTRACTS.

Favorable Report of the Attorney-General.—Naval Appropriations Bill.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—The auditor of the Pacific railroads, to whom the Senate Judiciary Committee referred the contract of the Pacific railroads with the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, after consultation with the attorney general has prepared a report setting forth that there is nothing in the charter of the Union Pacific road to prohibit the contract from being carried into effect, and as far as the interests of the Government are concerned, instead of being impaired they will be benefitted, as it will prevent any cutting of rates.

Chairman Atkins says he has completed the naval appropriations bill, and will report it at once to the House. The committee have added about three hundred and fifty thousand dollars to the estimates, fifty thousand being for torpedo boats, and one hundred and twenty-five thousand for the pay of officers, which was omitted last year.

The Democratic Happy Family.—A New Deal for Places Under the New York City Charter.

ALBANY, April 2.—The anti-Tilden and Kelly Democrats have concluded to organize a plan to select delegates to the Cincinnati convention by a mass meeting at Syracuse on the day of the state convention. Their scheme is to get a number of the delegates to the regular state convention to leave that and meet in a mass meeting with those who will be elected to the Kelly convention; elect national delegates will go to Cincinnati, claiming to represent the Democracy of the state, and demand a division as the representatives from their state. How far they will succeed in securing the co-operation of men elected to the regular state convention is an unsolved problem.

GLADSTONE VICTORIOUS.

The Liberal Boom Sweeping all Before It.—Conservatives Throwing up the Sponge.—Can the Liberals form a Stable Government?

LONDON, April 1.—The enthusiasm among the Liberals over the election returns is increasing. The totals thus far show a net Liberal gain of thirty-one seats. The Liberals have gained one seat each in Oxford, Nottingham and Chester and two seats in Salford. The Conservatives have gained one seat in Sheffield. The representation from Belfast and Londonderry is unchanged. Greenwich elected two Conservatives. Messrs. Harcourt, Childers and Bourke have been elected. H. C. Raikes, Deputy Speaker of the last House, has been rejected at Chester. In Edinburgh the Scotch Solicitor-General has been defeated by a majority of 12,000 against him.

The San Francisco Election.—A Sign of Increased Confidence.—The Question of a Contest.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 2.—As an earnest of the feeling of confidence engendered by the result of the election it is mentioned that the arms of the military companies which, during the late excitement, were removed to the Central Police station for greater safety, have been returned to the armories of the respective companies.

With regard to the reported contest of the election by the workingmen, Auditor Dunn, Attorney Murphy and Tax Collector Dillon, three members of the Board of Election Commissioners, say that a general conference for discussion was held on the evening of election day, but nothing definite was accomplished. Mr. Murphy has given as his opinion that there was not sufficient ground for a contest.

The Utes.—Colorado's Determination to get rid of Them.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—The Colorado people here are very angry because of the direction which the Ute negotiations have taken by the House Committee, looking to a retention of the tribe in their state. They generally say that the people will now settle the matter without troubling a red-tape Congress, and that if any Utes are left in Colorado by midsummer, they will be of the class known as "Good Indians." It is said that the Utes themselves are anxious to have the treaty ratified, as they appreciate the danger of remaining. Organizations exist and will show themselves openly in Colorado, to effect the enforced emigration or extermination of the Utes.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

JANUARY SESSION AT PROVIDENCE.

SENATE.

FRIDAY, April 2.

The Senate met this morning at eleven o'clock, His Excellency Governor Van Zandt in the chair.

Mr. Seabury, from the committee on finance, recommended, in concurrence, an act to enable the town of Bristol to make special appropriation to celebrate the approaching 200th anniversary of the settlement of the town, and passed to be engrossed.

Mr. Tillinghast, from the committee on the judiciary, reported back the act concerning tramps, recommending concurrence, but at his suggestion the bill was temporarily laid on the table, some of the members on the committee on the judiciary being absent.

The House bill entitled an act to provide for the services of a clerk in the office of the Commissioner of Public Schools was taken from the table and read and passed in concurrence.

Mr. Potter called up the bill for an act to establish a uniform system of insolvency, and the question before the Senate at the time of its last consideration being to lay it on the table, the yeas and nays were called, and the Senate refused to lay the bill on the table by a vote of 25 to none.

Mr. Tillinghast then addressed the Senate on the bill, advocating its passage, and illustrating the advantages to the debtor and creditor classes from having an equitable system under which their claims can be fairly adjusted.

At the conclusion of the Senator's address the Senate adjourned until Thursday, April 8, at 11 A. M.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

The House met at 10.30 o'clock, Mr. Speaker Spooner in the chair.

Mr. Sheffield called up the "Married Woman's act."

Mr. Sheffield said he would have pressed this act upon the attention of the Assembly earlier in the session had the committee which appointed it been ardently in its favor instead of simply acquiescent. And beyond this, he had been embarrassed by those women who came there so fierce for a chance to enter politics, while they manifested a complete indifference to the great rights of property, which were of so much more real importance to them. He then proceeded with a long and exhaustive argument in favor of the act, claiming that it placed man and woman in exact equality before the laws in matters of property, and pointing out and illustrating the evils of the existing law, especially as they bear upon women. He said there were more rights for women in this bill, than had ever entered the conception of those women who besiege the Assembly for the right to vote, to go into caucuses and to perform the duties of night watchmen. He did not expect to pass the act now, it was too abrupt. But he wanted the matter talked about and understood.

Mr. Payne was glad to see that the gentleman from Newport (Sheffield) was beginning to be interested in women's rights. He trusted yet to see him adopt the whole doctrine, political as well as material. He favored the act, but thought it better to have it lie on the table awhile for examination.

FASHION NOTES.

Striped India long shawls are now used for gentlemen's dressing-gowns, and for wrappers for invalids.

A new dress fabric with a satin surface is thickly covered with tiny peacock feathers, exquisitely executed with natural colors.

The glove is the most important article of a lady's toilet, and it must be nicely fitted and tastily match with the other apparel to complete the tout ensemble of her costume.

The Parisian says that as the tendency now is the ladies will soon wear dresses so tight fitting that they will have to soak them in warm water in order to take them off.

All of the feathered tribe, even those of the poultry-yard, have united in contributing to the trimmings for spring dresses, and feather borders are selected in a color to match that of the dress material.

This is said to be a leading year in the annals of fashion. Every three or five years there is a leading year, when the general outline is adhered to, and vagaries are confined to changes in small details that are whimsical but not revolutionary.

Among the pretty things for midsummer are round hats, scarf mantles, and fans of white muslin trimmed with lace. The fans are the spread Japanese of small size, covered with white silk or satin, over which are spread muslin and lace frills, with a cluster of bows of ribbon in the centre.

RESULTS OF VIVISECTION.

INTERESTING EXPERIMENTS.

PROF. MOTT SHOWS HOW PEOPLE ARE TAKING POISON IN THEIR DAILY FOOD—A PROLIFIC SOURCE OF DYSPEPSIA SCIENTIFICALLY DEMONSTRATED.

[From the New York Tribune.]

A series of highly interesting experiments with dogs has been lately made by Prof. Mott, and in the Scientific American of Feb. 7 a detailed account is given. The disclosures are so unpleasant and startling, coming home, as they do, to every one, that we believe they should be given the greatest publicity. The effort Dr. Mott is making to purify our articles of kitchen use should receive the support of every thinking man and woman. There has been too much indifference on this subject—an indifference that has resulted in Americans earning the title of "a race of dyspeptics." Poison, year after year is introduced into the stomach with a criminal disregard to consequences that is appalling. If every purveyor of domestic supplies will carefully consider the result of Dr. Mott's experiments, as detailed in the Scientific American, one of the greatest, if not the greatest, of these evils will be corrected.

Dr. Mott says: "The introduction of alum in flour, for various purposes, has been a trick of the baker for the past 100 years. Fortunately for society, its introduction is now limited to a few unscrupulous bakers. In England, France and Germany it is an offense punishable by fine and imprisonment to use alum in any connection with articles of food. It should be so in America.

The Royal Baking Powder Company, of this city, a long-established corporation, celebrated for the absolute purity of their goods, some time ago commenced a vigorous warfare against many of their competitors who were indulging in hurtful adulteration. The contest excited great interest in scientific circles, in which Prof. Augell, Dr. Mott and other leading lights took a very prominent part. The experiments of Dr. Mott are a result of this discussion, and go to prove conclusively that the most dangerous adulteration that a community has to guard against is alum in baking powder. In his paper, the Doctor says: "It is with difficulty I found a suitable place to conduct the experiments so that the animals would not disturb the neighborhood; but, through the courtesy of the Commissioners of the Dock Department, I secured a shed on their premises, foot of Sixteenth street and East river. This shed I had completely remodelled into a suitable house, having the dimensions of about 16x14x12 feet. Sixteen stalls were made inside, having the dimensions of 3½x2x2½ feet. The bottom of each compartment was covered with straw, making a pleasant bed for the dogs. I then secured 16 dogs from the pound, which were all carefully examined to see if they were in a perfect state of health. None but the strong, healthy dogs were selected. The breed, age, food, color and weight of every dog was carefully noted. Each dog was then confined to a stall and securely chained, and they all received a number, from 1 to 16. I commenced my experiments on the 9th of September, and finished Dec. 3. My assistant was with the dogs from morning until night, and never left the animals without first securely bolting and locking the dog-house. No stranger was allowed to enter the house unaccompanied either by myself or my assistant, and the dogs never received a mouthful of food or anything else from any one except from my assistant or myself. I will now detail the result of my experiments:

"Dog No. 1—Breed of dog, coach. Age, 1 year. Health, perfect. Food, bread and crackers. Color, spotted black and white. Weight 35 pounds.

"To this dog, on the morning of the 9th of September, was given eight biscuits at 8:10 o'clock. The biscuit were made by myself as follows: One quart sifted flour, 20 teaspoons alum baking powder, 2 cups water, 1 tablespoon butter, 22 biscuits made, weighing 27 ounces; time of baking, 20 minutes.

"At 11:30, just three hours and twenty minutes, the dog was taken very sick, vomiting profusely; his vim and brightness of eye had departed, and he trembled considerably in his limbs."

Experiments were then made upon three dogs with biscuits containing only 10 teaspoons of alum baking powder. The result indicated that some animals are more liable to yield to the effects of poisonous substances than others are. When, on the other hand, three other dogs were fed with biscuits made with pure cream of tartar baking powder, no ill effects were experienced. They ate and ate with an evident relish, day after day, and even whined for more.

It was next necessary to discover what effect alum has on the solvent power of the gastric juice. In order to obtain some pure gastric juice, a curious device was resorted to. Dr. Mott sent several dogs to Prof. Arnold, Medical Department of the University of New York, who inserted a small metallic tube directly through the skin and into the stomach of each one of them, when the dogs were in a perfectly healthy condition. Prof. Arnold sent to Dr. Mott some gastric juice, which was produced by tickling the lining of the stomach of the dogs with a feather or glass rod, which caused the gastric juice to flow out of the tube into a receptacle placed underneath the dog to receive it.

Dr. Mott, aided by Prof. Schedler, then began some experiments with the four samples of gastric juice, which he had received from Prof. Arnold, to discover the effect of the gastric juice in which alum had been dissolved upon fibrine, a white, very easily digested substance having a basis of coagulated blood. The fibrine was imperfectly digested, and the experiments were very important, as showing that alum can check the digestion of so easily digested a substance as fibrine. They indicate therefore, how dangerous it is to introduce these two salts into our stomachs, if we do not wish to excite indigestion and dyspepsia. Further experiments showed that the digestive power of the gastric juice is entirely destroyed by alum, so far as its power of dissolving the more indigestible substances, like the boiled white of an egg, is concerned.

Dr. Mott then determined to learn whether alumina could be found in the various organs of the body if a dog was fed with hydrate of alumina. He found a considerable quantity of the stuff in the blood, liver, kidneys, and heart.

The Doctor goes on to describe the different symptoms exhibited by these dogs as they passed through almost every phase of animal agony until they were left in a complete state of physical prostration. To those especially interested in the details of this subject the article in the Scientific American supplement will give most complete information, and we will spare the sympathetic reader the account of the sufferings of these dumb brutes.

Dr. Mott's conclusions, after making these experiments, are of vital interest to every one that either makes or eats bread, and therefore concern all.

"These experiments," said he recently, while speaking before the American Chemical Society, "clearly demonstrate that the salts left in the biscuit when a cream of tartar baking powder is used are perfectly harmless, but when an alum baking powder is used are very dangerous, for in every case where dogs were fed on biscuits, made with such powders the dogs were made very sick, causing them to vomit profusely, lose all energy, and show weakness in their limbs."

It is a clear and triumphant corroboration of the assertions of the Royal Baking Powder Company, and entitles them to the gratitude and support of the community they are endeavoring to protect. As they claim, and Dr. Mott has shown, bread made of alum is totally unfit for human or animal food. 'Tis true, in the bread of domestic consumption there may not be as large a proportion of baking powders as was in the bread used by Dr. Mott, and that accounts for the fact that the symptoms in the reader are not so well defined as they were in the experiments in question. How many there are of our friends suffering from this evil, scientific investigation will alone reveal; but many a lingering and suffering invalid, with no defined idea of his trouble, can easily trace it to its source by stopping the use of alum powders, substituting some brand like the Royal Baking Powder, whose manufacturers have a competent chemist in their exclusive employ, who rigidly analyzes every ingredient before its incorporation into their powder. The old cry of "honesty being the best policy" may be worn threadbare, but its truth will hold forever, and while adulterations and short weights abound, it is a pleasure to see at least one in the trade strenuously endeavoring to give full weights and pure goods.

NEWLY PAINTED ROOMS.—The danger of inhaling the vapor of turpentine has been long known, and its pernicious influence on the health is beyond all doubt, as has been verified in several cases occurring in persons sleeping in newly painted rooms, some of which have proved fatal. Several theories, more or less probable, have been propounded to explain the prejudicial effects of the inhalation of the vapors; but, whatever be the correct explanation, there is no doubt of the danger of occupying a room recently painted, in which turpentine has been employed, before complete desiccation has taken place. It was pointed out by the council of hygiene that a sudden death which recently took place in Paris was attributable to this cause, it being shown that it could not be ascribed to the lead which entered into the composition of the paint of the room in which the deceased slept; the lead, being fixed and non-volatile, cannot in these cases be accused of being the offending element.—[British Medical Journal.

Newport Daily News, and the Newport Journal.

The Newport Daily News is published every afternoon (Sundays excepted), at the News building, 127 Thames street, by Davis & Pitman.

The Newport Journal is published at the same office every Saturday morning and contains a selection of the best matter in the Daily, including editorial discussions of the topics of the week, literary miscellanies and at least one good story, the latest markets and a complete and comprehensive summary of the news,—local and general. The Journal is a large 32 column paper and contains a large amount of reading matter that is valuable to readers in town or country who desire a good Newport paper, but who do not take a daily from this city.

Complaints regarding the irregular or improper delivery of either paper should be sent to the office at once.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

The Daily News, $6 per annum, or 12 cents a week, payable to carrier.

The Newport Journal will be sent to any address in the United States, postage paid, for $2 a year. A discount of 50 cents is made when the WHOLE YEAR is paid STRICTLY IN ADVANCE.

These terms are invariable.

ADVERTISING RATES.

Ordinary advertisements, $1 a square, for the first insertion, and 25 cents for each continuance. Ten lines, or less, in this type, make a square. Advertisements in reading matter, are charged for, at 50 per cent. extra and are subject to editorial revision. A discount on these rates is allowed on all advertisements ordered in the Daily for one week or longer. Funeral notices 50 cents each. Yearly advertisers are limited to their immediate business and are allowed twenty-five changes a year. The circulations of the News and Journal being necessarily distinct, an advertisement inserted in both papers will reach entirely different sets of readers. As further inducement for advertisers to use both the News and Journal, a liberal discount on the combined rates is made.

PRINTING.

Connected with the News is a large and well appointed job printing office. All orders for work in this department will be promptly filled, and at reasonable prices. The patronage of the public is respectfully solicited.

The job office has recently been supplied with new type and a new press, especially adapted to fine work. Liberal supplies of choice papers, envelopes and cards, always on hand. Prices as low as possible for first class work.

A man registering as H. T. Lenox of New York committed suicide at Young's Hotel, in Boston, yesterday.

Rev. George Punchard, one of the founders of the Boston Traveller, and for many years its editor, died yesterday, aged 74 years.

The Boston Post says: Senator Mahone of Virginia weighs only ninety pounds; but can do as much mischief as John Kelley, who tips the scale at two hundred.

The Prohibitory State Central Committee, as we understand, some time since filled the vacancy on their ticket with the name of Senator Richardson, of Barrington. But as no general publication of the fact has been made many people do not yet know it.

A late summing up of the returns of the English elections, as far as received in this country, show that 218 constituencies voted; liberals elected, 206; conservatives, 122; home rulers, 12. The home rulers show a gain of 3. The London Standard concedes a clear gain of 50 seats for the liberals.

The prospects for the escape of Eugene Fairfax Williamson, the blackmailer persecutor of Dr. Dix, from the punishment he so richly deserves, on account of alleged insanity, seem good. An exchange thinks that "if this thing keeps on it will be necessary after a while, for the protection of society, to make insanity a capital offense, punishable with immediate death."

An attempt was made a few days ago to interview Secretary Schurz on the presidential question, but the secretary was too busy to talk; all that could be got out of him was that he is "opposed to a third term for anybody, and for Grant in particular." The Secretary was opposed to Grant once before but it did not seem to amount to much.

Yesterday morning, between 2000 and 3000 acres of woodland in the townships of Sayreville and Madison, in New Jersey, were swept over by fire. The woods caught fire from a spark from a locomotive on the Pennsylvania road. Several wood choppers' houses, wagons, wood-chopping implements and maple-sugar houses were consumed. All the farmers and laborers for hours fought the flames. Loss very heavy.

It is reported that the gift of $100,000 from ex-Gov. E. D. Morgan to the Union Theological Seminary is to be used to form a fund which is to be called the "Edwin D. Morgan Library Fund." The new building to be erected will also bear his name. The officers and directors of the seminary hope to make this the best theological library in the country for the use of clergymen and authors of all denominations. At present the library contains 36,000 volumes and 38,000 pamphlets.

Many of our most intelligent people are beginning to look to China as the future wheat market of California, a commodity which it behooves the growing industry of that state more than anything else to secure. It is also probable that the Celestials will call loudly for fire arms, ships, ammunition, &c., as well as wheat. With extended intercourse their taste widen every way. They can no longer live on rice and as they talk of "a foreign policy," they must therefore have what is needful to maintain it.

In the United States Senate yesterday, Mr. Conkling introduced a bill for a general bankrupt law. The Ute bill was discussed, but no action was taken. The Senate failed to agree to the House amendments to the caucus bill, and a conference committee was appointed. In the House of Representatives the star service deficiency bill was discussed, and the House finally concurred with the Senate amendments by a vote of 91 to 83.

The "rotten borough" system of Connecticut shows itself vividly in the local representation in the coming Republican State Convention. In Litchfield county 634 people send a delegate to that body. In the city of New Haven it takes 15,000 people to send a delegate. If any of our people are inclined to criticise our sister state it will be well to remember that things are no better in Rhode Island.

The Republican caucus is to be held Monday evening. The principal business is to fill the vacancy in the delegation to the General Assembly, caused by the proposed elevation of Mr. Fay to the Lieutenant Governorship. We see no other occasion for a change in the delegation, though it is said that the name of Clark H. Burdick is to be left off, if the machine managers can have their own way. Now that there is so much plain talk going on in political circles it may as well be said that this effort ought to be defeated. Mr. Burdick has made a good representative, has done much successful work for the party, is thoroughly honest, and we believe it will please the people to keep him in his present position.

HOW WILL IT LOOK?

To have the regular Republican candidates for Governor and Lieutenant Governor of Rhode Island defeated at the polls this Presidential year, no matter what the excuse for so doing may be? Will it give aid and comfort to Republicans throughout the country, or to their enemies?—[Central Falls Visitor.

How will it look? Why very much as though the Republicans of Rhode Island had made up their minds not to be bought and sold any more. It will look as though the one man power was broken, and as if the people had decided to attend to their own business, and in their own way. There has been no regular convention for the expression of the honest opinions of the Republican electors this year. A convention was called to ratify proceedings already consummated and that is all that was done. Did the people elect the delegates to that convention in the interest of Blaine? Does any man believe that the Maine Senator is the first choice of the Republicans of this state? And if he is not, why were Blaine delegates selected? Every one knows it was done by a shameless trick played upon the unsuspecting voters, and most people will feel that a convention that is hoodwinked and beguiled into decisions it did not intend, is not possessed of great authority over the minds and consciences of men. We think it will "look" well to have it understood that the crack of the whip in the hands of a would-be master fails to frighten anybody. And we think it will not "look well" to see intelligent men standing in awe of those who pack caucuses, pull wires, sell nominations, buy votes, and impudently ask us what we are going to do about it.

SECRETARY SHERMAN AS A PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATE.

No sooner does a man become a candidate for office than he is made a subject of personal abuse. The case of Secretary Sherman is in point. A special to the Graphic says: The papers inimical to Secretary Sherman have been teeming with charges that he has been attempting to secure delegates to the Chicago Convention by official coercion. It is well known in Washington that all the appointments which belong by law to the Secretary of the Treasury, are delegated by him to subordinate offices. The virtual appointing power in the Treasury Department during Secretary Sherman's incumbency has been Assistant-Secretary McCormick, Assistant-Secretary Hawley, Commissioner of Internal Revenue Raum and Superintendent of Engraving and Printing McPherson. Messrs. McCormick and McPherson are pronounced Blaine men. Mr. Hawley is known to be a Grant man, and General Raum was appointed to his present position by General Grant and is known to be a personal friend of his.

The first act of coercion on the part of Secretary Sherman to control any of his subordinate officers on this question is yet to be instanced. Some understanding of the use that has been made of the appointing power which is legally vested in the Secretary of the Treasury may be had from the following. It is reported from a certain internal revenue collection district in Kentucky that out of twenty-five internal revenue storekeepers in that district, twenty-four are supporters of General Grant and but one is for Mr. Sherman—and this in a district where Mr. Sherman's friends believe they have strength enough to secure the delegates to the National Convention. It is also reported from the same district that men have been offered commissions as internal revenue storekeepers if they would assist in defeating Mr. Sherman's delegates—proposing to pay them for opposition to Mr. Sherman with commissions signed by himself.

PRESENTATION.—At the close of the regular service at the Thames-street Methodist Episcopal Church last evening, Rev. Mr. Fernald, the pastor, stated that he had a few words to say to Mr. Isaac W. Sherman, in behalf of his brethren of the Quarterly Conference. In his remarks the pastor said that Mr. Sherman had been closely connected with the church in all its interests since its foundation and had been its treasurer for twenty-seven years, but at the last meeting of the Quarterly Conference had resigned that office, preferring that some younger member should be chosen. Mr. Fernald said that it was generally customary on such an occasion as this to render a vote of thanks to the retiring officer, but at this time he would, in behalf of his fellow members of the Quarterly Conference, cane him. Thereupon Mr. Fernald presented Mr. Sherman a gold-headed cane, inscribed as follows: "Isaac W. Sherman, from the members of the Quarterly Conference of the Thames street M. E. Church." Mr. Sherman was completely overcome with surprise, but after a moment made a few appropriate remarks in reply. The whole passed off in the most pleasant and agreeable manner and those who know the history of that church will feel that the recipient richly deserves the honor bestowed upon him.

A Good Act.—Patrick Clancy, an enlisted man of Co. E, 1st Artillery, was discharged some time ago from the service in consequence of expiration of his term of service. Spending as he did a great portion of his youth and manhood in the ranks, it naturally unfitted him for any other kind of business. Having seen service in the Utah expedition, Seminole war and the late civil war, one need not be surprised of his adhering longer to his military avocation. A special order, however, issued some time ago by the Secretary of War forbidding married men from re-enlisting in the army caused him much uneasiness. Since the 25th of March, on which date he was discharged after having given unbroken, continuous service, he worked hard to remain longer among the implements of war. Last Thursday's mail, however, brought him glad news, viz., an order from the Secretary of War to have him re-enlisted.

PRINCESS TOTO.

The management takes pleasure in announcing the production on Monday, April 5, in the Opera House, of the "Princess Toto," a comic opera by William S. Gilbert.

During a run of seven weeks in Philadelphia and three in Boston it has scored a decided success.

The Princess Toto is a charming young woman with one unfortunate failing—she has absolutely no memory. Even when she ties two knots in her handkerchief, one to remind her that she wants to remember something, and another to suggest the particular thing which she wishes to recollect, it is still no use. Her weakness is irremediable, and under the experienced manipulation of Mr. Gilbert leads to the strangest and most laughable consequences. There are two aspirants to her hand, but the princess cannot retain their respective images upon her mental retina long enough or with sufficient clearness to distinguish between them. She mixes them up worse than Buttercup ever did those unfortunate nurslings, and with results no less astounding than ludicrous. Without ever being off with the old love, she is perpetually on with the new. Having married the first comer with a light heart, in ten minutes afterwards she has altogether forgotten that little circumstance, and elopes with his belated rival, which does not prevent her from being perfectly willing to renew her marital pledge to husband number one, when he next gave her opportunity. Anyone acquainted with Mr. Gilbert's work—and who is not?—will readily understand what entertaining complications are evolved from such a state of things as this. "Princess Toto" would not be by W. S. Gilbert if it were not pungent with the salt of satire, but the humor is not so acrid as in such pieces as "Engaged" or the "Palace of Truth." The music of "Princess Toto" is of that order which improves upon a second hearing. The opera never ceases to be melodious, but it contains few airs for which the degradation of the hand-organ is in store. Its concerted numbers are the most effective, and its solos as tuneful as anyone could wish.

PORTSMOUTH.

Caucus.—The Republican electors of the town of Portsmouth are requested to meet at the Town Hall on Monday evening, April 5th, at 7½ o'clock, for the purpose of nominating candidates for Senator and Representative in the General Assembly.

DECLINATION.

To the Editor of the Daily News:

It is true as stated in your paper of yesterday that some of my Republican neighbors have asked if I would accept a nomination to the next Legislature, but I have positively declined the honor and hope my name will not be mentioned in connection therewith at the approaching caucus.

JNO. B. NEWTON.

MR. EDMUNDS AND THE PRESIDENCY.

The announcement some time ago, that Senator Edmunds was inclined to write a letter discountenancing the use of his name in connection with the Republican nomination for the Presidency, was unquestionably correct. There is no room to doubt that the statement rightly represented his personal feelings and wishes in the matter, but it was not conclusive as to what he may do. There is reason to believe that he has since been urgently advised not to write such a letter, by men whose wisdom and anxiety for the success of the party in the coming election give their counsel peculiar weight. It is no secret that Republicans of cool judgment, who are at present disposed to favor other candidates as their first choice, are desirous that Mr. Edmunds should do nothing at this time which would seem to take him out of the list of possible candidates. The conditions of the contest are such that many who are thinking more of the means of harmonizing the party and bringing its full strength to the polls than of the claims of individuals, are not only willing but desirous that Mr. Edmunds should have such support in the convention that he will be available, if a conceivable exigency arises, as a candidate upon whom all interests can unite without jealousies or heartburnings. While Mr. Edmunds is probably still strongly opposed on personal grounds to have any serious attempt made to give prominence to his name in this relation, and certainly will not give his sanction to any efforts to secure a nomination which he does not desire, it is earnestly hoped by many leading Republicans that he will not do anything that may prove an embarrassment to the party in case it should seem, upon consultation at Chicago, to be on the whole the wisest and safest thing to call upon him to lead the Republican hosts in the political campaign of this year. Under the circumstances it is not likely that he will be summoned to this post unless the party needs him, and if the need should arise it is desirable, thoughtful Republicans say, that there should be full liberty of action.—[Special to Boston Advertiser.

GLEANINGS AND GOSSIP.

The result of the English elections has created a profound sensation at Berlin.

In order to enlarge a church in Dover, England, a yew tree, 1000 years old, has been removed.

A railroad up the side of mount Vesuvius, after the style of the Mount Washington railway, has recently been opened.

The workmen employed in the granite quarries along the coast of Cape Ann are on a strike for ten hours. The companies refuse to accede to their demands.

Russia is reported to be diligently strengthening her hold upon the eastern shore of the Caspian Sea, preparatory to pushing her conquests in Central Asia.

A rather startling innovation has been introduced at the British Museum. Duplicate pamphlets are to be sold at auction on the premises. It is thought that they will bring better prices than at a public mart.

Yale College is much elated over the generous financial backing the University crew is receiving this year. The recent concert given in New York by the glee club for the benefit of the navy realized $1000, which, together with the $300 from the junior theatrical performance, $100 from the junior promenade, and $200 from the glee club's Western trip will supply funds enough for the crew this year. The crew has remained in training during the vacation and has kept hard at work in the boats.

A singular feature of our export trade is shown in the fact that America has so developed her facilities as to underbid even the Russians in laying down corn at Odessa itself. This causes the Russians to complain about as much as the English would do if America should begin to export coal to Newcastle, for Odessa has long been the principal depot of the grain trade of Europe. Corn is as plentiful as dirt in the interior of Russia, but the freights charged by railway and Black sea steamship lines are so excessive that merchants find it cheaper to bring grain from America.

The Empress Eugenie's famous pearl necklace is now the property of one of the richest women of Europe, Countess Henckel. The Empress had the pearls sold in London. One of her ladies, accompanied by two friends of the imperial widow, carried them to an English jeweler, who bought them and disposed of them to the Countess Henckel for $72,000. This lady had some of the pearls less beautiful than the others removed, and added two other rows; one of which came from the jewels sold by the Queen of Naples, the other, from the necklace of the Virgin of Atocha, sold by a great Spanish personage. At present the suite of pearls belonging to the Countess, earrings and brooch included, is worth $160,000 or $180,000, and is said to be the finest set of pearls in the world.

RELIGIOUS NOTES.

The Lord's Prayer has been published in one hundred and eight dialects and languages by the Evangelical Bible Society, and distributed throughout Russia, where these various languages are spoken.

Bishop Bedell of Ohio advises the clergy of his diocese to marry no couple until it has been ascertained that the marriage is legal and proper in all respects, and that neither party has been unscripturally divorced from a previous husband or wife; all which advice, it is suggested, is equally good for other latitudes, and for ministers of other denominations.

The Christian Herald unusually remarks that "Growling that does not make somebody else uncomfortable soon becomes tiresome to the growler. They tell of a man of this sort who went to heaven, and after a short stay there was asked how he liked. He replied that the accommodations were tolerable, but that his halo didn't fit worth a cent."

THE DESIGN OF THE PYRAMIDS.

It may not be amiss to notice here the work of Professor Piazzi Smith in which he says that the Great Pyramid was not a royal tomb, but was built to preserve astronomical data; and that the supposed sarcophagus in "the king's chamber" never held the body of Khufu, but was made for a metrical standard. This eminent mathematician has attempted to prove that the king used all the resources of a reign in erecting a pile five hundred feet high in order to make clear to future ages the points of the compass and the exact length of a Jewish cubit; and all this ages before the Jews had been evolved. Dr. Brugsch nowhere alludes to his ingenious folly, that we remember; but in the course of his work the designs of the pyramids is placed beyond controversy. The names of the principal pyramids are very significant: Qeh-eh, the cool: Au-setu, the purest of places; Kha-ba, the rising of souls; Men-setu, the firm place; Nuter-setu, the most holy place; Nofer-setu, the most beautiful place; Tat-setu, the most lasting place; Menankh, the inn of life; Khu-nofer, the good rising; Ba, the soul. These names show that the kings knew what they were building. In the early ages every Pharoah set about constructing his pyramid as soon as he was crowned. Later, when these piles had become numerous, it was the custom to make a chamber in the rock for a tomb.

One inscription relates the ceremony of placing the embalmed body of a king in his stone coffin in the heart of his pyramid. His son and successor spent a long time alone with the mortal remains; then he came out and "shut the doors, laying sealing-earth upon them, and pressed upon them his own royal seal, thus commanding the priests: 'I, I have completed the locking up; no other of my kings shall any more enter in.'"

There is undoubtedly evidence of great mathematical knowledge in the construction of the Great Pyramid. But because seven hundred and fifty-six, the number of feet in the length of one side, happens to be a multiple of the mean diameter of the earth, it is rather a violent inference to assert that the court architect was acquainted with that diameter. For we know how the pyramids were made; and if Khufu had lived another year the pyramid would have been the larger by one course of stone on each side. It is not doubted that The Lights (originally so called, perhaps, because encased in white marble) was a tomb, like all the others,—a wonderful tomb, doubtless, but still a tomb, and nothing else. When the pyramid was finished there could have been no access to the top either from without or within, and the theory of Professor Proctor that it was used as an observatory appears to be baseless. Without telescopes and the other instruments of the astronomer, an elevated platform would have been of little service. —[Francis H. Underwood, in Atlantic.

THE OLDEST LAWYER.

Hon. John A. Cuthbert of Mobile, Ala., is probably the oldest practising lawyer in the world. The Mobile Register says he is ninety-one years old, and is still engaged in the active discharge of his professional duties. He is a native of Georgia, was a member of Congress from that state in 1813, and was an officer in the war of 1812. We know of but one case in legal biography that exceeds this in longevity while engaged in active professional practice. Macaulay, in his "History of England," relates that when William III. invaded England and re-established the laws which James II. had subverted, he marched in triumph into London, and was met by the different classes of citizens with addresses of welcome. The members of the legal fraternity of London marched in procession to welcome the king, Sergeant Maynard at their head, then ninety-three years of age and the acknowledged leader of the London bar. After he had presented the address of welcome in the name of his brethren, King William said to him, "Sergeant, you must have outlived all the lawyers of your time." "Yes, sire," replied Maynard, "and but for your majesty would have outlived the laws."—[Albany Law Journal.

WORTH THINKING ABOUT.

The Boston Commonwealth says: "A rich business man of Boston died last week, but he lost a golden moment. That moment was when he should have determined and put in execution a purpose to pay off some old creditors. The rich man left a million dollars, it is estimated—more than enough for the wants of all his family; yet he failed twice during his career, and deprived many small tradesmen of their needed money. He could have paid them all off, with interest, any time during the past twenty years, and not felt it at all. He did not do it, and the sting of his wrong is felt keenly now. He loved money—was 'smart' and 'sharp' and gainful. He also loved the good opinion of the community, and in a certain way was public spirited, and cast about to benefit his fellows. Yet his public concern had a broad band of selfish delight in it—that he might be ministered to by the newspapers in their notices. How much better for his reputation for probity, for his selfish gratification, even, would it have been if he had but done justice to his long-suffering creditors.

ALBANY ELEVATORS.

Two nice old ladies, from Otsego county, presented themselves at the doors of the new capital elevators, recently, says an Albany contemporary. They were unmistakably from a very dense part of the country, and looked in astonishment at everything they saw.

"Going up?" says the elevator man.

"Land sakes! Is that the way you have to go up?"

"Yes'm. Jump right in."

"Young man," said the leading lady of the two, "how many will that there box hold, I'd like to know. It don't look amazing strong."

"It'll hold all that can get in. Come, hurry up."

The old lady still held back. "Don't be quite so chipper young man, even if you have got soldier clothes on. Is there much to pay for going up in this thing?"

"No, ma'am; nothing at all. We don't charge for anything in this building. You can put up a tent and live here if you like, and they won't charge you a cent, and they'll give you a first class cook, washer and ironer to wait on you to boot, if you ask for it."

"Land sakes! Don't those doorkeepers I hear of take your tickets like the regular circus doorkeepers."

"Yes'm; but then they give you the tickets for nothing."

"And there ain't nothing to be paid nowhere?"

No, ma'am; as a sworn constitutional officer, I say nothing."

"Then, that's very funny about my son-in-law, Gil, ain't it, Nancy? Why, my son-in-law, he had to come down here to Albany to get him an office, chief clerk or notorious public, or something. I had to let him have $100 to pay for it, because he said he had to pay high for everything in the Legislature—didn't he, Nancy? And this is an elevator, is it? Well, now, that is curious, too, because when he come home without a cent, and some of his clothes gone, he counted up his expenses, and he said that all that was left had to go for elevators. And you say you don't charge for elevators! And, yet, Azry Chase, from our county, was along with Gil, and he laughed, and said you had to pay a good deal for elevators down to Albany."

"Well," replied the guard, resolutely, "When I said you don't have to pay for elevators, I meant that ladies go free."

"Oh! I see young man."

And the two old ladies left the elevator for the ladies' gallery.

The Boston Traveller says: Mrs. R. W. McLaughlin, of South Boston, sister of the Rev. R. R. Meredith, spoke on temperance last evening, in Temple hall, Cambridge, before the Reform Association, and an audience that was confined solely to the size of the hall. Mrs. McLaughlin is one of the most eloquent speakers among the many that have yet addressed the association. She spoke for nearly three-quarters of an hour in a fluent, easy and unaffected manner, claiming the closest attention throughout.

In the New York Board of Aldermen a motion was made to purchase twelve gondolas for Central Park. This was opposed by a member, who thought the motion extravagant as to numbers, so he moved as an amendment that they purchase only two gondolas, a male and female, and trust to the future for increase.—[Boston Transcript.

The tariff got into its present shape on the "you-help-me-and-I'll-help-you" plan, and it looks as though, to change it, the "you-hurt-me-and-I'll-hurt-you" plan would be resorted to. The interests of the people at large count for nothing with the average congressman.—[Boston Transcript.

If there was ever a popular movement, initiated and carried on without the aid of patronage or party machinery, this [the Grant movement] is one; and the same deep and pervading influence which has made the ex-President's nomination probable, will make his election certain.—[Daily Advertiser.

A resolution has been introduced in the Louisiana Legislature prohibiting playing with the "fifteen" puzzle while the Legislature is in session.

GRATEFUL WOMEN.

None receive so much benefit, and none are so profoundly grateful and show such an interest in recommending Hop Bitters as women. It is the only remedy peculiarly adapted to the many ills the sex is almost universally subject to. Chills and fever, indigestion or deranged liver, constant or periodical sick headaches, weakness in the back or kidneys, pain in the shoulders and different parts of the body, a feeling of lassitude and despondency, are all readily removed by these Bitters.—[Courant.

The undersigned has sent, or will have sent within a few days, the bills due for the first quarter of the year. It is a matter of great importance to him that these bills be paid, and they are sent out with a big hope on his part that they will be. Among these bills are some that have been out on this hopeful errand so many times before that he feels a bashful modesty at sending them again, and after this last trial will be obliged to put them in other and less bashful hands for collection.

SATURDAY, APRIL 3, 1880.

Proof Positive.

"Yes, aunt," said Lillie Warden; "I am going to be married. At least," coloring up and dimpling all over like a grown-up baby, in her pretty embarassment. "I have it under consideration."

"Who's the young man?" said aunt Agatha.

"Well, he's not so very young," said Miss Warden; "At least not what you would call in his first youth."

"Ah!" said aunt Agatha, who had rather a genius for guessing riddles. "A widower?"

"Yes," said Lily. To tell you the truth, aunt Aggie, he has been married twice."

"And you want to be Number Three, eh?" said aunt Agatha.

"It's Mr. Vane," confessed Lily, skillfully evading the question.

"Oh!" said aunt Agatha; "Mr. Vane, eh? Yes; I've heard of him. As a general thing, my dear, when a man has killed off two wives—"

"Oh, aunt Agatha!" cried Lily, indignantly; "how can you talk in such a dreadful manner?"

"It's the story of Bluebeard, my love," said the old lady, beaming mildly through her spectacles. "As old as the hills! And you deliberately elect to become Fatima, or Scheherazade, or whatever else her oriental name was—"

"I haven't accepted him yet," said Lily, stitching away very fast at her piece of worsted-work; "but I like him very much indeed."

"Horatius Vane?" slowly repeated aunt Agatha. "I knew his first wife—a pretty, blue-eyed little dot of a thing, who blushed up when you looked at her, and faded away into the grave not a twelvemonth after she put on her wedding ring."

"Oh, yes; she fell into a decline," said Lily. "Mr. Vane sheds tears when he speaks of her."

"Old crocodile!" said aunt Agatha, with with energy. "Her mother says he killed her with his temper and tyranny, as completely as if he had held a knife to her throat."

"Mother-in-laws are always prejudiced witnesses," said Lily, petulantly.

"The second wife, too," said aunt Agatha; "she was a spirited, black-eyed girl from the South, with money of her own. She died in an insane asylum."

"It was hereditary," said Lily. "Horatius—Mr. Vane, I mean—has told me all about it."

"Perhaps," said aunt Agatha, coughing drily, "her relatives thought differently. I think they would be ready to practice Judge Lynch's code on him, if he ventures to present himself at her Southern home.

"That's all nonsense!" spoke up resolute Lily. Any man's character could be taken away with insinuations like those. If you could only see him, aunt Agatha."

"Hearing of him is quite enough for me," said aunt Agatha.

"He is so pious," said Lily. "He has a Bible class, and he's superintendent of the Mission Sunday school, and he has the sweetest Bible quotations ready for all the incidents in life. And oh, he is so charitable! He gives to the poor, and visits the sick, and—"

"Stay a minute," said aunt Agatha. "How do you know all this?"

"Why, from what he tells me."

Aunt Agatha smiled.

"My dear little girl," said she, "you wouldn't make a very good judge of the Supreme Court."

Lily pouted.

"You don't give me credit for even an ordinary amount of common sense," said she.

"Not while you are so desperately in love," said Aunt Agatha.

The girl worked on in silence. The old lady sat and watched her through the gleaming circles of her spectacle-glasses.

"She is like a child playing, all unconscious, on the verge of a precipice," thought aunt Agatha.

"How can I warn her? how dissuade her from the fate on which she seems bent on rushing? I firmly believe Horatius Vane to be a smart tongued scoundrel of the first water; but how can I prove it satisfactorily to her? If she wasn't a very considerable little heiress, I do not believe he would think twice of her. There are some emergencies; however, in which people can't interfere: A girl like Lilias Warden must choose her own fate—it cannot be chosen for her."

Gradually the shadows cleared away from Lily's brow; the sunshine came back to it. Aunt Agatha's words had instilled a sort of doubt into her mind, but how could that doubt linger long when once she thought of Horatius Vane's noble forehead, and soft, well chosen words? A philanthropist, a writer of sweet poems, a cultivated, royal-spirited gentleman. Did she not know him better than any one else could do?

"Aunt Agatha," she said, rising up, at last, and flinging her half completed wreath of floselle rose-buds into the work basket. "I think I shall go for a walk. Milly Braine, my old seamstress, has a child dying of consumption, in a tenement house down town. I'll take her a tumbler of jelly and a bottle of wine.

"My dear," said aunt Agatha, anxiously, "Do you think it is quite safe for a young girl like you to be running around in solitary places like that?"

"But it isn't solitary," said Lily, laughing. "There are at least ten families in the house. And poor, worn-out over-worked Milly is so glad when I come there!"

"Go, then, dear," said aunt Agatha, with a little sigh. "God forbid that any words of mine should ward off the slightest sunshine from such shadowed paths as that!"

* * * * * * *

Twilight in a tenement-chamber; the chill dark of a winter's night gathering slowly in a fireless room, where the black shadows seemed to cluster in every angle like whispering spectres, and the one flickering dip-candle scarcely sufficed to cast a dim circle of light by the bed where poor Milly Braine sat, rocking her ailing little girl to and fro. She looked up with an exclamation of momentary pleasure as Lily's cheering voice fell on her ear.

"No fire, Milly?" said the girl, looking around her, with a shiver.

"The coals are out, Miss Lilias."

"But you must have some more?"

"How can I, Miss Lily, with never a cent in my pocket?" cried out the poor woman, with momentary irritation. "Ah, it's little you rich people know of what the likes of us have to endure. Take my advice, Miss Lily, dear, and never get married."

"Why not, Milly?" said the young lady, slightly recoiling at this unlooked-for echo of aunt Agatha's heterodox sentiments on the subject of matrimony.

The woman lifted her hollow eyes to Lily's face.

"If I hadn't been married and deserted, miss, dear," she answered, "I wouldn't have been where I am now. I don't mind it for myself, God knows, but I can't endure to see this poor creature suffer!" with her cheek against the child's brow.

"All men are not alike, Milly," said Miss Warden, gently. "Here—give me little Lottie. I'll hold her for a while, while you take this money and run down to the corner for a bushel of coals and some kindling wood."

"I'd best not get too much at once, miss," said Milly, rising to her feet, with a flush of gratitude dyeing her pale cheeks. "For the landlord, miss, he's going to turn us out tomorrow morning, or maybe tonight, if the rent's not forthcoming, and—"

"Nonsense!" cried Lily. "Turn you out, with this sick child! Why, there isn't a stick nor a stone in the city that would do such a heartless deed as that!"

Milly shook her head.

"You don't know what sort of people there are in the world, Miss Lilias," said she. "And there's six weeks' rent owing; and—"

"I'll speak to him myself tomorrow, if you'll give me his name and address," said Lily, impetuously. "In the meantime, go for the coals as quickly as you can. This air is like that of Greenland."

And, taking the child tenderly into her arms, she sat down in the chair just vacated by poor Milly Braine, and began to murmur in its ear some of the old fairy tales of her own youth.

Suddenly, the sound of voices in altercation on the staircase reached her year. She paused in the middle of "Puss in Boots," while little Lottie clung closer to her shoulder.

"It's the landlord," said the child. "Leastways, the gentleman that owns the house. Oh, dear! oh, dear! he's going to turn us out of the house! Where shall we go? What shall we do?"

And, excited by a vague terror, her little heart began to beat like a miniature trip-hammer.

The next moment the door flew open, and Milly Braine came hurriedly in, closely followed by a tall and portly form.

"Come, now, I've endured this just about as long as I'm going to!" said he. "Sick! Poor! Out of work! It's what every good-for-nothing beggar about the house tells me—and I'm expected to support the whole gang of you! Is this all the furniture that you've got?" staring keenly about him. "But of course you've contrived to cheat me by pawning every stick or rag that you could raise ninepence on! Now mark my words, Miss Traine, or Braine, or whatever your name is, out of this house you bundle tomorrow, before nine o'clock, or you'll be put out by a constable! Who's this?" suddenly becoming conscious of the presence of a silent auditor in the shadows of the room. "One of your cronies, eh?"

"It is I, Lilias Warden, Mr. Vane," said the girl, setting down the child, and rising quietly to her feet.

"Eh!" The widower started back, with a tragic exclamation which would have made his fortune on the stage. "I—you—that is—"

"Don't trouble yourself to explain, Mr. Vane," said Lily, bitterly. "Your own words have already sufficiently interpreted your nature. "Milly," turning to the astonished woman, "come to my house, tomorrow, when you are turned out of this gentleman's domains. I will see that you are at least provided with food and shelter."

"But if I had known, Miss Warden, that she was a protege of yours!" interrupted Mr. Vane, after an oily fashion.

"The fact that she is one of the poor of whom our Saviour has said that 'they are always with us,' should have been enough!" said Lilias, coldly. "Save yourself further excuses. They are only time and breath thrown away."

And Mr. Horatius Vane slunk away, feeling excessively cheap.

"By Jupiter!" he said to himself, "I've ruined my own cause at last."

And so he had. And when Lily went home, and told Aunt Agatha all, the old lady only said:

"Thank God!"
